

Roderick Barnes, after leading the chapel, decided this was the best photo to take! And I agree!

Who jumps into the arms of really strong football players?

That would be my pastor, Roderick Barnes. In a unique intersection with AIA and church, one of many such occurrences I hope, Roderick and I were able to lead the chapel for the Rice University football team the night before their game versus UTSA. This is a voluntary meeting and as you can see was very well attended. The challenge that Rod gave was one of being filled with the Spirit. And that if you are filled with the Spirit your walk will be different. One of the guys there was also at our Christmas conference last year. So it was fun to reconnect with him as well.

Leading a team meeting for the UTSA basketball team. My new teammate took the photo!

Another great event this past month was getting to speak to the UTSA men's basketball team. Almost everyone on the team indicated that they would like me to connect with them. However, there is a large gap between them returning the comment cards and the likelihood of them actually answering their phones/text messages. So please pray that God would move! The prayer is that over the course of this year those players would both come to know Christ and develop a solid spiritual base from which to live and minister. They have such a unique opportunity to impact far beyond your typical student. Pray that would happen!

first time leading and she did so well. She sang and played a little piano. And this was Elijah's first time leading on guitar. What an amazing feeling it was to be able to worship together with them. And they did so well! (I know I may be a little biased!)

Finally...a fun personal ministry update. Lily, Elijah, and I got to lead worship together! This was Lily's

Be sure to check out this month's video!

Again...a short video update is up at www.dananddeann.com/videos. We are so grateful for your partnership and prayers. Thank you for being with us!
