Musings in Ministry

January 31, 2007

Happy New Year! God has been at work over the past few weeks through our annual Boston Winter Conference (BWC). Thank you for praying! I've attached a letter that conveys some of the things God did through this event and hope you enjoy it. Here's a recent snippet...

Just this week in the office, a student's dad called to follow-up on a couple financial questions from the BWC. As we chatted, he shared that prior to the conference he knew his daughter, a student in New York, was struggling with something, but he didn't know what it was or how to help. She came to Boston and God moved in her life. Her dad shared, "She came home and she was different... I know that God met her at the conference."

It is a treat for me to hear stories like this after the months we spend preparing for this event. I'm continually grateful for the ways God chooses to move in the lives of students. I am grateful for you - you make stories like this one possible!

End of the Year Update

You may know that at the end of 2006 I was faced with a funding shortfall of $12,350 due to short monthly support. God was so gracious and provided \$5,021 through your year-end gifts!

I am so grateful for your generosity! Thank you for your friendship and partnership in the Gospel. I'm blessed because I have you - a wonderful team working with me to reach students with the good news of Jesus.

Join me in praying that in 2007 every one of the 2.5 million students in the Northeast and the 110 million students around the globe will have the opportunity to know someone who truly follows Jesus. As always, I can't wait to share more with you next month!
