“Seeing people and how they want to know Jesus more makes me want to know Jesus more too.”

Madison students during a TCX outreach.

Joe then proceeded to say, “I don’t have to go to Jesus perfect—but as I am—and He will take care of me. God loves me now. And I’m committing to doing one year of full-time ministry after college.” This is TCX! It is our annual Christmas conference, and big things definitely happened again this year. What God did in Joe’s life is just one of the ways God moved in students hearts. This year we took 131 students to TCX. We love to get students there because it is four days of uninterrupted learning about Jesus, corporate worship, and amazing community. While the conference is only four days long, it always seems that the Lord does significantly more than four days worth of life change!

Here are snapshots of some of that life change:

Cassie: I always knew that God existed, but I never knew that right now He loves me and has a plan for me.

Brandon: I’ve been convicted that I haven’t made evangelism my lifestyle, because I haven’t been abiding with Christ daily. The gospel is supposed to be so common. We are called to be sent, called to breathe the Great Commission. I want to make the Great Commission my lifestyle!

This year’s TCX had a special emphasis on hidden sin. There were times of confession and prayer. One girl Randi stood up and said, “I want to share how God has changed my life in the last two hours. My image is that I’ve got it all together, or at least that is what I want you to think.” And in tears she said, “But that is just a mask. And the only way for me to take down the mask if for you to know its there.”

Another girl said, “I’ve been seriously depressed for the past two years and suicidal for the past six months. And I’ve been doing it alone. But God is telling me to tell people.”

Kelly, a girl in the movement, is following the Lord to the EDGE (a ministry located in very closed countries). She challenged the men to “Just man-up and go!” Then she looked at the women and challenged them saying, “And women, these men are going to man-up, so you need to woman-up and go too!”

One thing that is wonderful about reaching college students for Christ is the way that the Lord works in families. Jenny shared, “This time last year my parents weren’t following the Lord. And this Christmas I heard my dad pray for the first time.”

Our students at TCX—from Madison, Whitewater, and Platteville!

Thank you for investing in these students and helping make stories like these possible!
