Over Spring Break, Jeanne came to Christ!!!

Brodie (my teammate) and I met Jeanne at the beginning of this semester, when we were on campus one day, asking students to share with us about their spiritual experience. Jeanne invited us to sit down with her in a campus cafe where she was studying, and began to tell us about how she had been questioning for a decade what happened after death. We had a wonderful conversation with her that winter day, and as Brodie and I left the cafe we commented to each other, “God is definitely at work in Jeanne’s life”. We were very excited to see it!

Over the course of the past semester, Brodie and I continued to meet with Jeanne, just about every week, to discuss her questions about spirituality and talk about the Bible with her. It turned out that Jeanne had, despite her atheist/Buddhist upbringing, ended up with a whole bunch of Christian friends in college, and she was very curious about the God they claimed to know. She has a tender heart and a beautiful openness about her, and as we talked with her every week, it became very apparent that Jeanne had a deep desire to know God. My times with Jeanne, talking about Jesus, answering questions about Him, sharing our hearts and our spiritual experiences, were always the highlights of my week.

Jeanne went with another Brown Christian organization down to New Orleans to do Hurricane Katrina relief work for Spring Break. In her words, she wanted to spend her break with others with whom she could “think about her questions about God”. And when I had dinner with her the week after, she told me that some time that week she had realized that she had come to believe, not only in God’s existence, but that she could have—and wanted—a relationship with Him through Jesus.

I cried for a couple of days after hearing that from her—there are students at Brown who are searching for God! He is rescuing people here! We’ve seen one other woman, after a two-year journey, put her trust in Christ this semester, and there are many others who are spiritually searching with whom our staff and students are sharing the gospel and their lives.

Please Pray With Me!

- For Jeanne to become well-grounded in her faith in Christ, especially since she will be abroad all next school year
- For the other students we are sharing with about Jesus: that God would draw them to Himself and that they would desire to come to Him
- For the ending of our school year: that we would have good closure with our students for the summer, saying goodbye to the seniors, and sending all of the Christian students off to be witnesses for Christ in their summer jobs
- For Jason and me to have wisdom and direction as we seek God about our future... We’re trying to make some major decisions by May 9th!
- For Jason and my relationship: that God would strengthen our trust in Him and our trust in one another and that we would choose to live based on that trust
