

Greetings! The beginning of the school year has flown by and I realized that I missed by August update. It's been such a crazy two months but two months filled with travel and speaking engagements that have brought so much life and renewal. Here are a few snapshots from this last month! Thank you for allowing me to do all the things and I'm so thankful for the opportunities that I have been given!

Please continue to pray for another few months of travel. I'll be speaking at our Texas Fall Retreat this weekend and then heading to Orlando, Israel, Hawai'i, Albuquerque, and then giving leadership to our National Conference in Houston late December. In the midst of that, would you continue to pray as I develop a team of new ministry partners to help me as I continue to raise support! So excited to share with you stories of life change and ministry impact that each of you are contributing to!

I started the month heading up to San Luis Obispo to be with their Epic Leadership Team for a couple of days. This ministry has been such a source of life for me as I sit and get to learn from 40+ students leading this movement as one with a heart and desire to reach their campus. I got to share with them the conviction of my own heart to be reawakened to prayer and to remind ourselves of the reality that when we pray, the atmosphere will shift. It was such an encouraging time and my prayer is that this year, the Lord would move and bring revival to this ministry and to the SLO campus through prayer and each of these leaders!

The next trip I took was to Portland, Oregon to meet with a team of Local and Global Mission Directors. We spent three days together looking at our National priorities as well as coaching plans for our campuses around the world. We also took some time engaging in cultural learning together as we learned about the history of Portland at the Shanghai Tunnels (Portland Underground Tour) and spent some time at the Portland Chinatown Museum. It was fun to learn together and eat dim sum together! =) Just getting to be together was an encouraging time and it reminds me of the privilege I have to serve alongside such great men and women!

I finished off this last weekend with our San Jose Team speaking at their Fall Retreat! What a fun time to be with them, to connect with their students and staff, and to get to speak out of the book of Jonah. It was such a joy to teach the Word of God and to learn together and grow together. I'm encouraged as they had new students come out including a few students from Japan join us. It was a sweet time of connection and being with students that I often times miss in my current role. Continue to pray for this team as they lead together and reach the Silicon Valley!
