Being present at activity fairs, like this one at Salem State, gives us a chance to meet incoming students. We not only meet Christians who are excited to find out there is a place where they can connect with peers on campus to grow in their faith, but we also meet students who do not yet know Christ. Last year Sydney was one of those students at the University of Vermont.

She signed up to join in our event "Explore the Stowe Waterfalls." Although Sydney considered herself to be an atheist, she loved the students and staff involved with our ministry at UVM. Sydney got involved with us and even brought her roommate Cait along. Cait came to Christ when she traveled with the UVM Crusade group to Guatemala during spring break.

Last week during a women's small group Sydney said, "I feel like I've been resisting God for a long time... He's been so merciful to me; so patient." Over the summer, God continued to work in Sydney's life. She was in Alaskan and became friends with the Campus Crusade Alaska Summer Project students. After her experience with our staff and students at UVM and on the summer project she, was more open to hear and receive the gospel. She's joyfully talking with other students sharing the story of how God changed her heart toward Him.

Please pray for Cait and Sydney and other new believers on campuses around the northeast. Please ask God to give our staff stamina and grace as they follow up with all the students who have expressed some kind of interest at the activities fairs. Please pray for me to have wisdom and grace in leading others and in making decisions.

Thanks for your prayers and for you financial gifts. It is your partnership that enables me to do the work God has for me to do - which helps students like Sydney and Cait come to know Jesus.

Because God loves,
