

“I’m too busy to sin much,” a student named Emmanuel said.

As Joe and Emmanuel continued their conversation Emmanuel's understanding increased. He went from not seeing his need for Christ, to placing his trust in Him by the end of their time together. Emmanuel prayed a simple prayer placing his faith fully in Jesus.

A Cru student at the Fashion Institute of Technology posted this on Facebook:

I am amazed at how God is moving at FIT. Each and everyone of these girls is an answered prayer. After my Freshman year at FIT I decided to give my life over to God, one of the hardest things was finding like minded people that had a hope for the people in the fashion industry. These girls are precious to me and I wouldn't have it any other way. I am honored to lead the future of the Fashion industry all for his glory! Spreading love, hope, and purpose. This is our women's book club which happens every Tuesday.

New York University, November 5

Based on Marian Jordan Ellis' book, Sex and the City Uncovered, Girls' Night Out is an evangelistic event designed for college women. Using media clips mixed with her personal testimony, she discusses the many things girls use to fill the “God-shaped holes in their souls”. Girls' Night Out ends with a clear gospel presentation and each event is followed up with discipleship book clubs.

Please take a minute to pray this outreach effectively reaches many women with the gospel.

Team in NYC

Last year there would have been 6 people in this picture. Some of these are still in the preparation phase others have already moved to New York and are reaching students for Christ. It's so exciting. Your partnership has helped this happen. God has blessed our work of the past few years to bring these great results. Thank you so much. And thanks be to God.

Liz Kealy Leadership Development Director Northeast.
87 Bancroft Ave, Reading, MA
302-353-2025