Doughnuts, Chicken Sandwiches, and the Gospel

Similar to last year, I lent a hand with a high school outreach that took place on eight different campuses this past week. I handled much of the "behind-the-scenes" logistics, but my favorite part was helping my two high school kids as they worked hard to make their event a success. I'm definitely a proud papa that David, my sophomore student, and my daughter Abigail, a senior, helped lead the outreach at their school, Amherst High. The idea was simple: invite students to stay after school to hear a speaker share how Jesus has changed her life. To spread the word, students handed out free doughnuts and flyers before the event, and anyone who came to the event got a free Chick-fil-A sandwich. And let's be honest... who says no to a free Chick-fil-A sandwich? About 46 students showed up, heard a clear presentation of the Gospel, and a few have already expressed interest in checking out their weekly meeting. The speaker for the afternoon, Laura Lewis, sent me a text message after the event saying, "That was way too much fun! Grateful. Praying for every heart!!!" I'm thankful for students who are willing to step out, invite their friends, and create spaces where their classmates can hear about Jesus.

A Night of Big Questions at the University at Buffalo

Recently, we had the opportunity to team up with a few other campus ministries at the University at Buffalo to host a special guest speaker, Abdu Murray, a former Muslim turned Christian apologist. Our Cru students jumped right in by inviting their friends, and we covered campus with posters and flyers to spread the word that Abdu was coming. The atmosphere was electric the night of the event! Abdu spoke for about 45 minutes, sharing his story and why he believes the message of Jesus is true. After that, we opened it up for an hour of lively Q&A with the audience. Students asked thoughtful, honest questions, and Abdu engaged with them in such a clear and gracious way. I'm always grateful when we can bring an evangelist, like Abdu, on campus. It helps our Cru students' faith and confidence grow when they realize their faith can stand up to the hardest questions. It is also great to see students who don't yet know Jesus stay the whole time and feel safe enough to ask the toughest and most honest questions they're wrestling with. These moments are so vital. It was a great night of meaningful conversations and thoughtful dialogue about Jesus. Thank you for making these conversations possible!
