CRU MISSIONARIES AT BUFFALO | Nov 2013

“Can you drive into the countryside and look for 100 cheap pumpkins?” This is a request that you don’t usually ask an intern at a typical job, and as Carl (our intern) and I were driving back into the city, our cars bursting with pumpkins, I was reminded that God has called us to something unique. God has not called us to just gather the Christian students, but to continue to seek the lost. Oct 30th, both Daemen College and University at Buffalo (UB) had pumpkin carving party outreaches on campus to try to connect with more students. Daemen had around 50 students come, and UB had around 30 students in the freshman dorms come carve pumpkins with us. It was a lot of fun seeing students laugh at pulling gooey seeds out and carving creative faces in all the pumpkins. We praised God for the ownership that Cru students had in bringing their friends and taking steps of faith to initiate with new people at the party.

Matt, our student leader at Daemen, started talking to Jared about spiritual things while carving pumpkins. Jared said "I am interested in spiritual things just not Christianity. I just can't believe most of the things Christianity claims." Soon after sharing that, Jared had to leave so Matt set up a meeting with him to talk further. Would you pray for that conversation? Also, would you pray for the new students that have started attending the weekly meeting after coming to this event? I think it is so cool how God works and that He will use something like carving pumpkins to draw students to Himself.

For the first time, we have a core group of student leaders (above) that help us plan, evaluate, and pull off events!

Thank you for praying for Buffalo college students and our family! Because of the Gospel, Kevin & Jenn Abbey, David, and Pete
