Multiplication

February 2010

The vision of Bill Bright when he founded Campus Crusade for Christ in 1951 was this: reach the campus today, reach the world tomorrow. But how do we reach the campus today? Even just reaching the 16,000 undergrads here at USC seems overwhelming! The good news is that when Christ left his disciples with the Great Commission, he also left them with an awesome model to follow. It's the same simple model that we base our ministry on today as we attempt to turn lost students at USC into Christ-centered laborers: make disciples who will make disciples.

One of the most exciting things about this year has been the growth we've seen in the culture of our students. Making disciples is becoming the norm. As our staff met with our top student leaders this afternoon, we mapped out the discipleship relationships we know about in our movement. It was so encouraging to see how many people ended up on that chart—several of whom weren't even believers when they came to USC! The number of students that are pouring out their lives and teaching others has grown dramatically since we started here 2 1/2 years ago. As a staff team of 6, it would be next to impossible to make sure every student gets to hear the gospel. But the 120 or so students that are being built up in their faith and trained in ministry have a much better chance. It's the idea of spiritual multiplication: if we reach a few, who reach a few, who reach a few more....the number grows exponentially. It's how Jesus started his ministry—with 12 faithful disciples.

Praise God for our students who are changing this campus and, ultimately, the world for Christ! And thank you for the part you play in reaching these students!

Prayer and Praise

- Casey, our new staff girl and USC graduate, started working with us this semester!
- At least 5 of our seniors are currently applying to go into full-time ministry after graduation—very unusual for USC!
- Students are going to 4 locations for spring break missions: Seattle inner city, Mexico, Australia, and Dominican Republic
- Janice, a Chinese international student that I just met, wants to meet again to talk about God. Pray for our time!
