So how do we describe summer project?. Even a short project, like the one we just finished in San Diego, seems to be too much for this small space. So I thought we might do something different by letting you hear a snippet of what two of our students learned on project.

The past couple of weeks have been truly divine for me. My precious God has been opening my eyes and heart to the richness of His love and plans. I've been challenged, humbled, amazed, and the journey has left me even more captivated by my ever-present Companion.

I am in awe of the way God orchestrates love and truth into our lives. I wasn't prepared as we went out to minister to others' hearts for how much my own heart would learn and feel and change. It is so sweet- the way the Lord has gently instructed, encouraged, guided, and then, in heartache, surrounded me with compassion and support.

As I reflect on the last two weeks and talk to others about my experiences, I realize how much God has truly taught me. Even though the summer project was only two weeks, I feel as though I have learned year's worth of lessons. Lessons about my personal walk with God, who I am as person, life, and my relationships with others. So here is a deeper reflection on the last 14 days of my life.

Part of trusting God, was allowing the Holy Spirit to fill my life. This theme was the central topic covered in 'classroom' lessons on the project as well as 'laboratory' exercises. From these, I gained greater insight to what the Spirit filled life looks like. One of the staff leaders said, "Genuine spiritual growth is a process of being transformed and made holy through submission to the Word and the Spirit." This I know is how God changed my life over the course of this project.
