Every Day in May

With the second half of spring semester being very different than usual, we wanted to keep our students engaged a little longer before summer break. We coordinated a group devotional through the gospel of Luke and called it "Every Day in May." Matt mailed a 30-day devotional resource to 60 students, which helped them learn how to spend quality time in God's word every day. It wasn't perfect but God used it! Here are three testimonies about how our students grew closer to God through the process.

Noah Weiss – Butler Basketball Manager

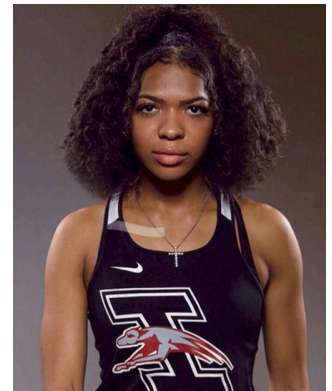

"My favorite part about this devotional was how it took me deeper into the Scriptures. The questions gave me a better understanding of what Jesus taught His disciples, and how I can walk it out myself. I can see how God is alive and active today just like He was back then.

Before, I read the Bible as just another book for good advice. But now I slow down and reflect on how to live out what I'm learning. I want God's word to permeate my soul. This journey radically changed my view of the Bible and walk with Christ!"

Mary Watts – U of Indianapolis Track

"I'm more aware of how I can improve my spiritual life. Before, I would read shorter Scriptures, but I wasn't fully engaged with God's word. Going through this journey changed my relationship with God and His word. Now I have a growing desire to build my relationship with God and other believers.

With the prayer template provided in the devotional, I went to a deeper level than I thought possible. I realized my lack of confession and listening to God. I'm yearning more after God and eager to read the Bible now!"

Nate Walker – Butler Football

"Having done Bible studies before, I was expecting this devotional to be pretty standard. But the deeper I went, the more I realized it was unlike anything I've done before. I started feeling the Holy Spirit guiding my days, and I began recalling verses I had read earlier in the day.

My time spent in Luke instilled more humility and generosity in me because I see more clearly how Jesus lived that out every day. I'm seeking to live my life after Him, serving others and building deeper relationships with my teammates. I'm excited for the next chapter of my walk with God!"
