Ministry in the Fall

A few years ago, our ministry philosophy shifted away from quantity to focus more on quality. We believe a few men and women whose souls are set on fire by the gospel will have a larger ripple effect in the long run. That's why we put our best energy toward leading discipleship groups, which are small groups of student-athletes who want to grow in their faith and have a ministry with their teammates.

As we start thinking and strategizing for the fall semester, there is some uncertainty about what ministry will look like. But we do believe our core pieces of ministry will continue. Please pray for the Lord to:

- Connect us with athletes who want to be discipled and reach their teammates
- Prepare the hearts of incoming students to hear and respond to the gospel
- Give us new and creative ideas to engage and reach the campus through athletes

Our Commitment to You

As we've spent the past few weeks connecting with many of our ministry partners, we're reminded of how critical our team of partners is. Though we are on the "front lines" of engaging and reaching lost college students, your role is just as necessary to the success of this missionary work. Our commitment to you remains steadfast. In the power of the Holy Spirit and by God's grace, we will continue to:

- Diligently reach college students with the good news of Jesus
- Regularly communicate how God is at work in and through us
- Faithfully steward the funds given to maximize our ministry
- Consistently uphold one another in prayer

We want to do better at consistently praying for our ministry partners. Please stay in touch and let us know how to pray.

Thank you for being on our ministry team through your giving and prayer! We count it a privilege to partner with you in making an eternal impact on the lives of future leaders.
