Expanding the Mission

Student-athletes are struggling even more with anxiety and fear from not knowing if or when they can compete again. We know the good news of Jesus carries hope for the whole person, including their mental health. It's this conviction that drives us to reach and disciple college athletes, even in uncertain times. Here is a snapshot of how we are trusting God to expand the mission.

This semester Matt is investing every Tuesday morning toward expansion work. What that means is he's praying, seeking, and trusting God for open doors and new connections. He loves this part of his role as team leader! It's a creative outlet to dream and envision how we can advance the gospel on campus through the platform of sport. Every Tuesday is a new adventure!

Jacelyn, a new student leader at Marian

A week ago, Matt was prayer walking on the campus of Marian University, which is an 8 minute drive from our house. We're just getting started with our ministry presence on Marian's campus through the women's soccer team. Another team we want to reach is the cycling team. They are highly respected nationally and 14 of their athletes are from outside the U.S. We also have a neighbor who is a coach for the Marian cycling team. There is great potential for Kingdom impact through student-athletes at Marian. We need God's Spirit to go before us and build bridges of love which can bear the weight of gospel truth.

We made a recent connection with the men's basketball team at IUPUI, a campus within the Indiana University system located in downtown Indianapolis. Matt and Andre' (one of our volunteers) met with the head coach to setup a team Bible study. There were so many things God did to lay the groundwork for that meeting, and it's shaping up in a way only God can do!

We feel the impact of your prayers and need them to sustain us in this missionary work on campus. There are many pockets within our ministry scope (four college campuses across the city of Indianapolis) we have yet to engage and reach. Please pray for God's Spirit to make new connections with people who can help us advance the gospel on campus through the platform of sport.
